Hi Liz,

No problem at all. I did try to call and follow-up, but you must have been away from your desk. We just kept missing each other I think. All sorted now though. Look forward to meeting with you tomorrow.

Thanks for your telephone call earlier and thanks very much for working to such a tight timeframe. I have just had a discussion with my Director (Yolande Yorke) about meeting with officers from DoH and she has asked if we can organise it for Wednesday afternoon next week. Are you able to provide me with the contact details of the relevant officers who will attend the meeting?

Hi Heidi,

Through to the mental health branch, that's curious. I am on the phone so perhaps my phone is diverting there. Who is picking it up? I'll get our admin people to chase down why that is happening.

As soon as I am off this call, I will call you. Our response is in the system. Sorry it was delayed yesterday due to workload and sick leave.

My ADG has asked for further detail about how this commitment was made and by whom. For example, was it part of the government response tabled by the Minister for Health? I have conducted a search of the Parliament website, however, I have not been able to locate any information in this regard. Are you able to provide me with this information?

Hello Heidi – please see the response below from Prof Michael Humphrey.

Kind regards

Andrea

Dear Heidi

The Queensland Maternal and Perinatal Quality Council discussed your question at its 9 December 2014 meeting.

The Council believes that the most appropriate form of review for stillbirths is multi-disciplinary clinical review, with special attention being paid to normally formed mature babies who died during labour/birth. It is the Council's view that this latter group (babies of 37 weeks gestation or more [and that could reasonably be extended back to 28 weeks or more] without congenital malformation should die quite infrequently in the labour/birth process, and should be examined by a Root Cause Analysis or some other formal form of process review.

If the Coronial Law is to be changed to encompass stillbirths the Council would suggest that it would be quite inappropriate to examine all of the 450-500 stillbirths per year in Queensland. It is reasonable to say that most unexpected stillbirths are in the group of babies of 37 weeks gestation or more without congenital malformation that die during the birth process

Cheers
Michael Humphrey

Hi Andrea,

I hope you are well.

As you may recall, I have been considering possible amendments to the Coroners Act 2003 regarding the investigation of stillbirths. In correspondence from the Office of the State Coroner a reference is made to advice from Professor Humphrey that in his view 'only those intrapartum stillbirths where the foetus has reached 28 weeks or more gestation warrant independent review'. I have been asked to ascertain the rationale for Professor Humphrey's view. Are you able to facilitate this?
